INVITATION LETTER

University of Sarajevo – Faculty of Political Sciences since its establishment in 1961, has actively embraced various forms of international academic exchange. Over the past decade, we have dedicated significant efforts to fortifying international collaboration and expanding our network of partners. This endeavor involved initiating bilateral cooperation agreements with interested faculties and universities, developing an English-language course catalog for incoming students, and establishing comprehensive procedures for the preparation, implementation, and monitoring of realized mobilities. These efforts also encompass continuous information dissemination and promotional activities to encourage mobility. The Faculty of Political Sciences actively engages in numerous inter-institutional agreements and facilitates academic exchanges between students and staff with counterparts from faculties of political and social sciences from all over Europe.

In our pursuit of contributing to broader internationalization initiatives, we have launched an event called "International Social Science Week". This year's 5th International Social Science Week serves as an interdisciplinary forum, featuring lectures and discussions that highlight the faculty's international activities and collaborations. The genesis of this event stems from our desire to provide students with an expansive platform for knowledge acquisition and the exchange of perspectives with professors and colleagues from partner universities across Europe and the world.

The guest lectures conducted in English are strategically designed to inspire students to engage with major social issues through interdisciplinary collaborations transcending disciplines, languages, and borders. These lectures and discussions are of huge benefit for students across all three cycles of studies because we incorporate topics from various scientific disciplines taught at the Faculty of Political Sciences (political sciences, sociology, communicology, social work, security, and peace studies).
